A Soldier's Diary: Bougainville Crisis: Part One

Mr Jonathan A Waisele : A Soldier's Diary: Bougainville Crisis: Part One before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised A Soldier's Diary: Bougainville Crisis: Part One:

Based on the true story of the day to day events of the Papua New Guinea Defence Force soldiers; they were sent on a mission to solve a problem without first solving their in-house problem. Loyal as they went, they met their fate on a brother land. A force that sprung out of nowhere was formed to protect their motherland. It was a civil war: the Bougainville Revolutionary Army against the Papua New Guinea Defence Force which caused the giant CRA Copper Mine, the Bougainville Copper Limited (BCL) to close losing billions of dollars. This is the Beginning of the Bougainville Crisis.

About the Author Mr Jonathan A Waisele is 45 years old and comes from East New Britain Province of Papua New Guinea. He completed his year ten education and won a National Scholarship to attend an Agricultural College in East Sepik Province where he didn't complete his studies due to various demands by the local landowners of the area in which the College was established on. Here, he withdrew from school. Couple of months later the college was shut down. In 1988 04th of July, he was enlisted with the Papua New Guinea Defence Force. Spent six months duration in his recruit trainings then was posted to the First Battalion of the First Royal Pacific Islands Regiment, Taurama Barrack in Port Moresby the capital of Papua New Guinea. After serving two years with B Company of the First Battalion, he was posted to the Recon Unit where he served the unit for ten years. He was then transferred into the intelligence stream. His aim is to write three books about the Bougainville Crisis in which the third book will be donated to the children of Bougainville Island. Jonathan is married with four children.
