Armoured Warfare in Northwest Europe 1944-45 (Images of War)

Anthony Tucker-Jones : Armoured Warfare in Northwest Europe 1944-45 (Images of War) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Armoured Warfare in Northwest Europe 1944-45 (Images of War):

Content fair...printing quality horrible.By Wanting to be a satisfied customerWhile the content is fair and somewhat interesting the folks at Pen and Sword should be ashamed of themselves for putting out such a poor quality printed product.The horribly poor quality pictures due to lack of the use of ink makes it a effort to view the pictures. Many of the photos are available on both the net and other publications and this is the worst quality of printing that I have seen. Some are completely unviewable. It is not the quality of the negative but the quality of the printing.I would recommend against purchasing this product and spending your hard earned money elsewhere.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. I use these photos for modelling reference. The captions are not great and there are plenty of mistakes in these books.

This latest volume in Anthony Tucker-Jones series of photographic histories of armored warfare records in graphic detail the role played by tanks, infantry fighting vehicles and self-propelled artillery during the decisive campaign in northwest Europe in 1944-5. In a sequence of over 200 archive photographs he shows how American, British, Canadian, and Polish armored divisions spearheaded the assault on the Third Reich, and how the Wehrmacht mounted a desperate armored defense. Tanks were required to operate in the dust of Normandy, the mud and waters of the Scheldt and Rhine rivers and the snows of the Ardennes and the forests of Germany. A succession of crucial armored engagements was fought during the D-Day landings, Operation Goodwood and the struggle for the Bourguibus ridge, the Falaise pocket, the Seine crossing, Arnhem, the German attack in the Ardennes, the Rhine crossing, in the Reichswald and during the rearguard actions and the last-ditch tank battles fought by the panzers in the Ruhr before the German surrender. Anthony Tucker-Jones photographic survey of the ultimate tank battles of the Second World War illustrates the range of armored fighting vehicles that were developed during the conflict, and it features the specialized vehicles deployed in Europe for the first time such as the Buffalo, DUKW, Weasel and Terrapin.

Complementing the images is a detailed narrative text placing the pictures in full historical context...A treasure trove of visual military history, Images of War: Armoured Warfare in Northwest Europe 1944-1945 is an excellent addition to reference and college library collections.
