

#2000272 in Books Doster Emily Jean 2011-09-05 2011-09-05Original language:EnglishPDF # 1 9.25 x .31 x 6.50l, .70 #File Name: 0738587923128 pagesAthens | File size: 48.Mb

Emily Jean Doster, Gary L. Doster
*ebooks | Download PDF | *ePub | DOC | audiobook*

(Download pdf) Athens (Postcard History)

Athens (Postcard History)

Emily Jean Doster, Gary L. Doster : Athens (Postcard History) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Athens (Postcard History):

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five StarsBy Frezer Tadessegreat book, in great condition.1 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Great gift for someone who loves Athens!By AnnhadI bought this book for my dad who was born and raised in Athens, and who has a very special bond with the city; I will be giving it to him for Christmas and think he will love it! The pictures are great, lots of different aspects of historical Athens covered; only thing that I wish was in it was an index at the back of the names of those in the photos, as I was hoping to connect some dots with our families last name. It's a great inexpensive gift though and a great buy!!!

When the University of Georgia was founded in 1801, the city of Athens did not yet exist. The school's first classes were held under the trees, and Athens grew up around the school. As the university and Athens expanded, the town became the economic and cultural center of a large section of northeast Georgia, and many beautiful homes and other buildings were built. Fortunately, Athens was not in the path of Yankee general William T. Sherman's army when they sacked and burned a 30-to-60-mile-wide swath through Georgia between Atlanta and Savannah during his infamous March to the Sea in 1864. Consequently, several historic buildings still stand on the university's campus, and many beautiful antebellum homes still grace Athens's streets, avenues, and boulevards.

About the AuthorAuthors Emily Jean Doster and her grandfather Gary L. Doster are natives and lifelong residents of the Athens area. Emily Jean is a 2009 graduate of Oconee County High School and is currently studying journalism at Georgia College in Milledgeville. Gary is a retired wildlife biologist and research coordinator with the University of Georgia.