Marc Vellay, Kenneth Frampton : Pierre Chareau. Architect and Craftsman 1883-1950 before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Pierre Chareau. Architect and Craftsman 1883-1950:

From Library JournalThis is the translation of a very extensive monograph on the French architect, designer, interior decorator, and furniture maker who is best-known for his Maison de Verre built in Paris in the 1920s. The authors provide substantial text, excellent photographs (many contemporary with the objects), and a thorough catalog of the work of this Art Deco artist whose multi-faceted work has been overshadowed by the famous glass house. There is a somewhat confusing catalog of Chareau's work, but on the whole this excellent book is highly recommended.
