0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. if you enjoy contemplating the passing years and seasons of lifeBy Tim BubnaIf you are old enough to have even a little bit of nostalgia in you, if you enjoy contemplating the passing years and seasons of life, you will relish these brief reflections, layered with rich meaning. Philip Stover is a unique combination of educator and student, preacher and researcher, traveller and observer of culture. As you ponder these homilies, it will be evident that he has also cultivated a habit few of us bother to pursue: unhurried meditation. A great gift idea for your reading friends! Enjoy.

This book contains over forty short stories written by Phil related to his hobby of collecting watches and clocks and his life's seasons, aspirations, and hopes. Drawing on his ministry and historical studies background, these stories are meant to both entertain and inspire the reader in a non-sectarian way. Ranging from one to eight pages, they reflect Phil's enjoyment of a good story, especially one that engages the reader with humor and inspiration. Read one a day or read them all at once. In the pages of this book you will find stories that will entertain and inspire you. If you are interested in the times and seasons of life, you will find stories that will challenge you, make you think, and which you can simply enjoy. There are stories for specific holidays and events. Most are simple stories that take their inspiration from the world of clocks and time. If you are a member of the NAWCC, a watch or clock forum, or someone simply looking for good stories about time, this book is for you. Many of these are real stories from Phil's life, lived as a professor, public school administrator, pastor and collector of watches. Phil has retired now to a ranch in Chihuahua, Mexico where he spends his time writing, growing pecans and raising cattle. For many years he spent time going nuts in the world of public education; now he spends his time growing nuts! Not too much difference! Enjoy! Check out Phil's other books as well. Have fun and remember "making time is more important than telling time!" The book is available on Amazon as either an eBook or a paperback. The photos in the eBook version are in color; those in the paperback are in black and white. The eBook has location numbers; the paperback has page numbers. The text is identical in both versions.

About the Author Phil Stovers career has spanned thirty-eight years of service in ministry and education. He has held key administrative and academic posts in both K-12 and higher education, most recently serving as Deputy Superintendent in the San Diego Unified School District and Interim Superintendent in the Sweetwater Union High School District. His extensive and diverse academic training is evenly divided between education, history, theology, and psychology. Additionally, he served as an ordained Baptist and licensed Mennonite minister, as well as an associate professor specializing in the integration of psychology and theology. In 2002, Philip Stover was elected a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society. He was appointed to the Sarasota County Historical Commission and is a member of the American Historical Association and the Conference on Latin American History along with a number of other historical groups. He is also a member of the National Coalition of Independent Scholars. Phil has a ranch in Mata Ortiz, Chihuahua where he grows pecans and various fruits. He is a gifted speaker and enjoys presenting to various clubs and fraternal groups in the Casas Grandes/Galeana region about the area's history, especially that of its colorful revolutionary period. Phil's most recent book Reflections on Time is a delightful collection of stories about time and its influence on our lives. Phil draws on his years as a collector of watches and clocks, a historian, and a professor to weave wonderful stories into the tapestry of the book. If you like a good inspirational, yet non-sectarian read, this book is for you. Phil's books are as much about the joy of writing as anything else. In addition to Reflections on Time, Phil has published an award-winning (Writers Digest) scholarly work, Religion and Revolution in Mexico's North about the impact of religion and revolution on each other in Mexico's turbulent past as well as a guide to the beloved pottery of the village of Mata Ortiz, Chihuahua, Mata Ortiz Pottery Buyers Guide. In the fall of 2016 Phil will publish The American Public School District, an analysis and memoir of his time spent working in and with America's public school districts. Continuing with his love of the study of religion and conflict, Phil will publish, in the winter of 2016 For Thy Kingdom, a doctrinal case study of the Mountain Meadows Massacre in Utah in 1857. All of his books are available on as either an eBook or a traditional paperback.
